Global security and «soft power 2.0»: challenges and opportunities for Russia

The book is dedicated to the study of one of the most pressing challenges of the XXI century - the use of advanced information and communication technologies (ICT) in the modern global security matrix. In the book, the present stage of the information revolution - coverage of global social networks of billions of participants - is investigated as a fundamentally new geopolitical phenomenon.

The book presents the latest theoretical and practical developments at the intersection of ICT and international relations to the new challenges and threats and opportunities as well as features of civilization and Russia to ensure global security.

Taking into account rapidly expanding tools of «soft power 2.0» in world politics work may be useful for readers interested in current issues of international relations. Read more...
